The latest incarnation of the Shropshire AS website has now gone live, warts and all. The issue of clarity and viewing across a variety of platforms is in hand. As for content, well that is all down to you, the members. We always say that the society belongs to the members and not just the committee, which is never more important than for the website. It is not the intension of the website just to be a collection of links to other sites, you can manage those yourselves. The concept is to reflect the work of the society and its members, and to be a platform to help others make the most of their interest(s) in all things space. So really it over to you to get your fingers tapping those keys and let me have your contributions or links to your own websites and blogs. Steve S
